ICARIA

JOURNAL FOR WRITERS AIMING HIGHER™

Icaria is a different kind of literary journal, celebrating what's best of the new and the old. There is writing that inspires with its reach, its sheer ambition. These are the works that have pushed the limits of American literature and stirred the imagination of readers and writers for generations. Icaria seeks to recognize them by reprinting previously published -- perhaps forgotten -- works by American authors side by side with works from new, soon to be discovered writers who are reaching for the extraordinary. In a time of literary amnesia, and fascination with ego-driven prose, Icaria provides literary perspective, in the notion that the great performances, timeless, elevate us all.

Publisher and Editor in Chief Monte Schulz published his first novel, Down By The River, in 1990, and spent the next twelve years writing a three-part novel of the Jazz Age. The first book, The Big Town, is currently being offered for publication. He wrote it for his father, the late cartoonist, Charles M. Schulz. Monte Schulz has an M.A. in American Studies from University of California at Santa Barbara, and leads a workshop, “Creating Style,” every summer at the Santa Barbara Writers’ Conference. He splits his time between Santa Barbara and Nevada City, California.
